GA-based MyHealth Network Selects Valence Health for Population Health Management and Clinical Integration Solutions

Practice Management Services Provider Taps Valence Technology and Services to Improve Patient Care and Bottom Line

Chicago, IL – June 4, 2013 – ValenceHealth, a leading supplier of population management, clinical integration and value-based care solutions, announced today that it was selected by MyHealth Network (MHN) to help make affordable, quality healthcare accessible to the patient population it serves. MHN is based in Columbus, Georgia and provides a full array of management services for hospital, physicians and ancillary providers. MHN will work with Valence to design, develop and optimize a clinically integrated network to improve the financial performance and clinical care of its providers and physician-hospital organization.

“Partnering with Valence Health will be critical to our ability to further our goals around practice management, population health management and clinical integration,” said Melissa Nichols, executive director of MyHealth Network. “Because we’re in the business of providing expert services, we need a partner who has a history of clients using their software solutions to increase quality of care. We’re confident we found such a partner in Valence, whose pragmatic approach to data collection and software design will quickly allow us to integrate our providers across all care settings.”

Under the agreement, Valence will provide MHN with services to build its clinically integrated network and the ValenceVision technology platform. The Vision platform will combine data from MHN practice management, hospital information systems and dozens of EMRs with lab, prescription and other data sources, to provide a comprehensive clinical view of patient care. Once operational, the system will allow care providers and coordinators to identify customized patient populations based on combinations of clinical information – such as conditions, gaps in care per evidence-based guidelines, lab results, vitals and more.

“MyHealth Network clearly sees the future of care delivery and evolving payment models, and has made a conscious effort to be at the forefront of change to benefit its providers and the patients they serve,” said Valence Health CEO Phil Kamp. “Valence will fully support MHN’s efforts to provide a common data platform, unified clinical information and a set of care guidelines for its providers, paving the way for collective contracts and potentially risk-based contracts in the future.”

MHN supports a total of 340 physicians across three hospitals and ancillary practices. Valence Health will help further MHN’s objective of bringing high quality care and controlled costs to its member physicians and organizations through clinicalintegration built on agreed-upon quality standards and linked across a common clinical information platform.
